HAPPY
NEW YEAR

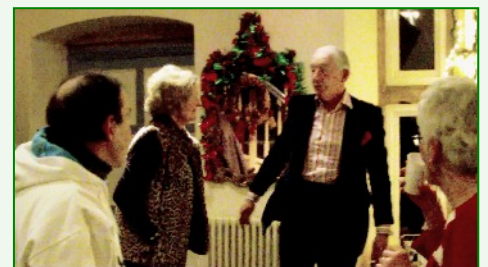

The New Year is upon us and so is our first important date: auditions for our spring production 'Heatstroke'. This is a wonderful farce by that master of comedy writing, Eric Chappell (of TV's Rising Damp fame).

It is set in a Spanish villa in summer so it should help dispel those winter blues! See Page 2.

Christmas Party 2012

Our Christmas Party at The Cider House sparkled with merry talk and happy laughter in an evening of good food, drink and festive cheer.

Many thanks to our hosts Myoko and Adrian Thorpe for their warm hospitality.

Members Meeting: "relook at ourselves and move forward in the best possible way"

Near half our membership (i.e. 40) packed into the Clubroom for the Members Meeting last month.

Our Chairman, Stuart McCreadie, opened by giving a brief outline of the events as they unfolded and the decisions that were taken by the Committee.

He also recounted the efforts of a Radio 4 reporter rooting around by phone and by door-stepping, trying – and failing – to dig up a story.

He then invited members for their comments and any points they wished to raise.

There followed a discussion in which some 18 members chose to speak. Many spoke on aspects of 'child protection' and the need in the future to demonstrate more clearly our policy.

There also seemed to be general support that Charles be welcomed back as a member at some time in the not-too-distant future "when the dust has settled."

There was also a call for the revival of 'The Winter's Tale' – fairly soonish while the cast still remembered their lines!

The meeting, which lasted just over half an hour, ended with Stuart promising that we "relook at ourselves and move forward in the best possible way."

Oh, and a plea for someone to step into the role as Treasurer!

The meeting ended with a round of applause of thanks to the Committee.

Cast: Sam Spencer
 Fay Spencer
 Howard Booth
 Dodie
 Raynor
 Mad Dog Moon

SYNOPSIS: Sam is your typical middle-aged angst-ridden man. Life hasn't been too good to him lately and he needs a lucky break. A mix-up of holdalls at the airport leaves him in possession of one packed with half million. Just what he needs.

Fay, his wife, is the sensible one who has done the one daring thing in her life by arranging a sneaky and free holiday in her boss's Spanish villa. She tries to be the voice of reason among the mayhem that ensues.

But the villa has been double-booked! Howard is a middle-aged actor, thrice married, who never quite made it because his talent is far less than he thinks it is. There's a strong smell of ham about this character.

Dodie is the young actress Howard has tempted on holiday; she has a sharp line in sarcasm. She's not really sure why she came, but is more than willing to join the plot to get her hands on a decent share of the money.

Raynor has a sense of mystery when he first appears, but is really a bog-standard detective who is not as resourceful as he thinks he is.

And then there's Mad Dog Moon, the gangster with the twitch he doesn't realise he has. Threatening, sadistic, and twitchy, a performance of this character needs to be funny without going over the top.

The assumed identities, breakneck pace and hilarious mishaps of farce mix with the tension, mystery and startling plot reversals of a thriller in this clever and amusing play.

Pinero's 'The Magistrate' a fast, furious and brilliantly plotted farce set in Victorian London kicks off NT Live 2013 productions.

Gently exposing the hypocrisy behind the well-upholstered manners and morals of the upper middle-class, The Magistrate follows the misfortunes of the Posket family in a tale of much dissembling. Having deceived her second husband - Aeneas, the magistrate - about her age, Agatha Posket has had to corroborate her story by telling him that her son, Cis, from her previous marriage, is 14 when he is actually 19. And when this secret is threatened by the appearance of the boy's godfather, Colonel Lukyn, Agatha is drawn further into mischievous plotting.
